U.S., Iran Set Meeting on Iraq

Amid tensions, 2 countries to discuss security in Baghdad

BAGHDAD | The United States and Iran have set a date for ambassador-level talks in Baghdad on the deteriorating security situation in Iraq — the first such meeting since late May, U.S. and Iraqi officials said Sunday.

The two sides will sit down together on Tuesday, according to Iraqi Foreign Minister Hoshyar Zebari and U.S. Embassy spokesman Philip Reeker, amid U.S. allegations that Tehran is supporting violent Shiite militias in the country.

Zebari told The Associated Press by telephone that the discussions would be at the ambassadorial level and would focus on the situation in Iraq, not on U.S.-Iran tensions.

Iraq's fragile government has been pressing for another meeting between the two nations with the greatest influence over its future, and Iran has repeatedly signaled its willingness to sit down. State Department spokesman Sean McCormack said last week that Washington was also ready to hold new talks with Iran on the security situation in Iraq.

The May 28 meeting marked a break in a 27-year diplomatic freeze between the U.S. and Iran and was expected to have been followed within a month by a second encounter. But after that meeting, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and other officials said Iran had not scaled back what the U.S. claims is a concerted effort to arm militants and harm troops. (AP)

LAWN CARE

Bikini Lines Take on a Whole New Meaning

A Memphis, Tenn., lawn care company is showing a little skin in order to boost business. The women of Tiger Time Lawn Care offer to mow customers' lawns dressed in bikinis — a service that attracts more attention to the ladies than to the lawns. Owner Lee Cathey said the bikini service makes mowing the lawn a lot more interesting — but the fee is slightly higher than the regular service. The company is looking for ways to expand the service past the summer. Cathey said there hasn't been any interest in a male version of the bikini lawn cut. (AP)

The Kid Is Da Bomb ... Well, Maybe Not

Emergency crews evacuated an Eastern Illinois University building on Friday after a campus postal carrier discovered a disheveled-looking application heading for the college's admissions office. "There was no return address, it was poorly written, poorly addressed to the university; there were misspellings," school spokeswoman Vicki Woodard said. Woodard wouldn't say whether the bomb scare would affect the sender's chances of being accepted. (AP)

Official: Force Possible in Pakistan

Bush aide says U.S. could deploy military to root out al-Qaeda

WASHINGTON | The U.S. would consider military force, if necessary, to stem al-Qaeda's growing ability to use its hideout in Pakistan to launch terrorist attacks, a White House aide said Sunday.

The president's homeland security adviser, Frances Fragos Townsend, said the U.S. was committed first and foremost to working with Pakistan's president, Gen.

White House aide Frances Townsend said the U.S. will work with Pakistan.

Pervez Musharraf, in his efforts to control militants in the Pakistan-Afghanistan border region. But she indicated the U.S. was ready to take additional measures.

"Job No. 1 is to protect the American people. There are no options off the table," she said. "No question that we will use any instrument at our disposal" to deal with al-Qaeda.

In the National Intelligence Estimate released last week, analysts stressed the importance of al-Qaeda's increasingly comfortable hideout in Pakistan that has resulted from a hands-off accord between Musharraf and tribal leaders along the Afghan border.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid said he agreed with Townsend that the U.S. should consider going after al-Qaeda militarily "wherever they are."

"We have the NIE report, which just came out, that says al-Qaeda during this administration is stronger than ever. I don't think we should take anything off the table. Wherever we find these evil people we should go get them," the Nevada senator said. BEN FELLER (AP)

Official Accepts Blame for Mess Over Passports

WASHINGTON | The current passport mess has resulted in a rare event among government foul-ups: A top federal official has publicly taken the blame and expressed regret.

"Over the past several months, many travelers who applied for a passport did not receive their document in time for their planned travel. I deeply regret that," says Assistant Secretary of State Maura Harty. "I accept complete responsibility for this."

The massive backlog in passports started after the government started requiring more Americans to have passports in an effort to thwart terrorism. (AP)

Midlife Anorexia Climbing

Experts say eating disorders are affecting more women over 30

MINNEAPOLIS | Kelli Smith was nervous as she walked into the Philadelphia treatment center, seeking help at last for her anorexia. Looking around at the other patients, she was struck by how young they seemed.

"I just kind of looked around and I thought, 'Oh, where is someone my age?'" recalls Smith. At 31, she found herself face-to-face with teenagers and 20-somethings.

Eating disorders such as anorexia and bulimia have long been considered diseases of the young, but, experts say, in recent years more women have been seeking help in their 30s, 40s, 50s and older.

People who study eating disorders suggest several reasons for why there might be more women over 30 seeking treatment: growing public awareness, social pressure to be thin and an aging group of baby boomers.

In the Minneapolis suburb of St.

Kelli Smith, 39, went into a residential treatment center for anorexia at 31. Eating disorders have long been considered a disease faced only by young people.

Louis Park, Park Nicollet Health Services' Eating Disorders Institute saw 43 patients age 38 in 2003 — about 9 percent of its total patients. For the first six months of this year, the institute has treated nearly 500 patients over 38, about 35 percent of its total.

The Renfrew Center, a network of treatment centers, said about 20 percent of the 522 patients treated at its Philadelphia center in 2005 were 30 or older.

"Whatever this is — if it's an increased awareness, if it's a response to being in midlife — those numbers are staggering," said Carol Tappen, director of operations for the Eating Disorders Institute.

Police: Adopted Infant Taken By Biological Mother

JACKSON, MISS. | Two women and an armed man stormed a home wearing masks and kidnapped an infant one of the women had given up for adoption, authorities alleged Sunday. The baby was found unharmed at a military base three states away.

Investigators found the 5-month-old girl early Sunday at Fort Bragg, N.C., and planned to file state kidnapping charges against her biological mother, Jamie Kiefer, and related charges against the child's biological aunt, Rikki Swann, said Special Agent Jason Pack, an FBI spokesman.

"Apparently, it was related to the adoption of the baby," Pack said. "Apparently, Ms. Kiefer had changed her mind about the adoption." CHRIS TALBOTT (AP)

Spy Director Says CIA Does Not Use Torture

But McConnell refuses to say which tactics are used in questioning

WASHINGTON | The nation's spy chief on Sunday would not identify what CIA interrogators are allowed to do in getting information from terror suspects but tried to assure critics that torture is not condoned or used.

National Intelligence Director Mike McConnell defended an order from President Bush that broadly outlines the limits of how suspects may be questioned in the CIA's terror interrogation program.

The executive order bans torture, cruel and inhumane treatment, sexual abuse, acts intended to denigrate a religion or other degradation "beyond the bounds of human decency."

The order does not, however, say which techniques are permitted during harsh questioning.

"If I announce what the specific measures are, it would aid those who want to resist those measures," McConnell said.

When asked whether the permissible techniques would be troubling to the American people if the enemy used them against a U.S. citizen, McConnell said: "I would not want a U.S. citizen to go through the process. But it is not torture, and there would be no permanent damage to that citizen." BEN FELLER (AP)

Turkey's Ruling Party Wins at Polls

Parliamentary election gives PM a boost in bid to define government

ANKARA, TURKEY | Turkey's Islamic-rooted ruling party won parliamentary elections by a wide margin Sunday, and the prime minister pledged to safeguard the country's secular traditions and do whatever the government deems necessary to fight separatist Kurdish rebels.

With more than 99 percent of votes counted, television news channels were projecting that Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan's Justice and Development Party would win 341 of the 550 seats, down from 351 in the outgoing parliament.

Erdogan, a devout Muslim, told supporters in a victory speech that he would preserve pluralistic democracy and work for national unity.

"We will never make concessions over the values of people, the basic principles of our republic. This is our promise. We will embrace Turkey as a whole without discriminating,"

Workers sort ballots from the Turkish legislative election in Ankara Sunday.

he said at a rally.

The election was called early to defuse a showdown with the military-backed, secular establishment, which contended that Erdogan and his allies were plotting to scrap Turkey's secular traditions despite their openness to the West.

Erdogan raised concern with his efforts as prime minister to make adultery a crime and appoint former Islamists to key positions. Critics were also troubled by his calls for the lifting of restrictions on the wearing of Islamic headscarves. (AP)

HOME FIRES: South Koreans call for the safe return of the 23 hostages in Afghanistan during an anti-war rally in Seoul Sunday.

Afghan Militants Seek Hostage Trade

Taliban eyes exchange of Afghan prisoners for 23 Korean captives

KABUL, AFGHANISTAN | A purported Taliban spokesman said Sunday that the hard-line militia had extended by 24 hours the deadline for the Afghan government to trade captured militants for 23 South Korean hostages.

Afghan elders leading the hostage negotiations met with the kidnappers and reported that the Koreans were healthy, said Khwaja Mohammad Sidiqi, a police chief in Ghazni district, where the Koreans were kidnapped Thursday.

He said the delegation made progress in their talks, but the Afghan military said Afghan and U.S. troops had "surrounded" the region in case the government feels the military should move in.

Qari Yousef Ahmadi, who claims to speak for the Taliban, said the militants were giving the Afghan and South Korean governments until Monday morning to respond to their demand that 23 Taliban prisoners be freed in exchange for the Koreans.

The militants kidnapped the Koreans while they were riding on a bus from Kabul to Kandahar. It was the largest single abduction of foreigners since the 2001 fall of the hard-line Taliban regime.

The 23 South Koreans, including 18 women, work at an aid organization in Kandahar, said Sidney Serena, a political affairs officer at the South Korean Embassy in Kabul.

Sudan: Rise In Security For Darfur

On trip to troubled region, al-Bashir claims gains in stability

KHARTOUM, SUDAN | The Sudanese president and Cabinet ministers convened for an exceptional session in Darfur on Sunday as part of a government effort to showcase that the troubled western Sudanese region is now largely pacified.

"We would like to stress that the situation in Darfur is not the [world's] worst humanitarian tragedy, as western media describe it," President Omar al-Bashir told supporters at a rally in the North Darfur state capital of El Fasher after holding his Cabinet meeting.

Al-Bashir said his three-day tour across Darfur showed that insecurity was not prevalent there anymore. His visit came as the U.N. and various humanitarian groups report near daily occurrences of violence, car hijackings and clashes throughout the vast, arid region.

The United Nations says over 200,000 people have died in Darfur since 2003, when local rebels from ethnic African tribes took up arms against the Arab-dominated central government, accusing it of decades of neglect and discrimination. MOHAMED OSMAN (AP)

Buried Cognac a Rare Find

WWI trenches still stocked with French supplies in Macedonia

GRADESNICA, MACEDONIA | Ninety years ago, a German artillery shell exploded in a battlefield trench in this remote mountain village, killing a band of French soldiers during World War I.

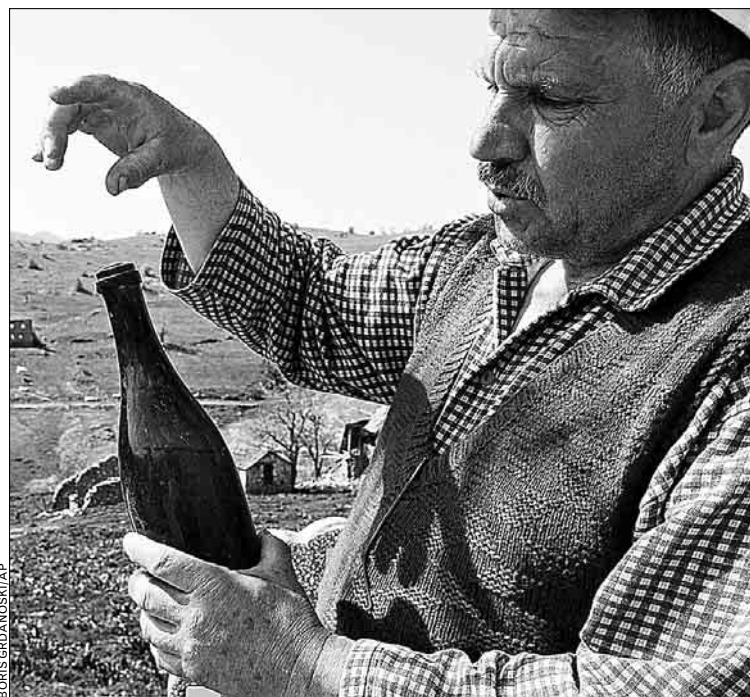

But their spirits live on in Gradesnica: A liquid fortune in vintage cognac and wine — army rations that since 1916 have matured into an exquisite elixir — lies buried in the old trenches.

Villagers unearthed the first case about 15 years ago. Since then, digs have yielded several cognac caches, usually containing about two dozen bottles each.

"At first, we were afraid to taste the dark, thick liquid," said resident Stefan Kovacevski, 64. "But ... this must be what people mean by the nectar of the gods."

Some have been discovered by farmers plowing fields, and at least two batches came to light after a glint in the sand of an old trench caught a villager's eye.

There's more to it than a good tittle. The old-fashioned cognac bottles can fetch up to $6,800 from collectors, according to Mihail Petkov, professor of viticulture and oenology at Skopje University.

Najdo Koleskovski, a 56-year-old cattleman in southern Macedonia's village of Gruniste, shows a bottle unearthed from trenches dug by French soldiers in WWI.

Gradesnica lies in the heart of the Mariovo region, near the border with Greece. There is no asphalt road, and during the harsh winters, the village is cut off from the rest of the world. Only army vehicles can get through with necessary supplies.

"This is probably the most beautiful part of the country, forgotten by all," said Dano Popovski, 64, owner of the only shop in the village.

Villagers say foreigners — including many French — are scouring the area for cognac, maps in hand. None of the villagers said they had sold any of the bottles.

"Nothing tastes better, and that is why the French come here," said Petar Sindevski, 73, from the village of Staravina. "There must be a lot of stocks of cognac or wine buried in this area," he said. "It is a real treasure." KONSTANTIN TESTORIDES (AP)

Israeli Text Shifts Take on '48 War

Arab students' new schoolbook refers to Palestinian tragedy

JERUSALEM | A new third-grade textbook for Israeli Arab students acknowledges that Israel's creation was a tragedy for Palestinians, Israeli officials said Sunday — a rare statement that remains explosive six decades after the country was founded.

The books issued by Israel's Education Ministry for the upcoming school year describe the events of 1948 and 1949, when Israel's creation drew an invasion by Arab armies, resulting in fierce fighting and the displacement of some 700,000 Palestinians.

The new textbooks give the Jewish narrative of the war, pointing out the Jews' historical connection to the Holy Land and their need for a state because of persecution in Europe, said Dalia Fenig, an Education Ministry inspector. But they also offer the Arab version of the war for the first time, she said, explaining why its results were tragic for Palestinians and referring to the Arab defeat as "al-Naqba," Arabic for catastrophe.

"The new approach says, why should you hide anything? That won't make it disappear, and ... the issues can be debated," Fenig said.

Fenig said the Education Ministry has no plans to introduce the Arab narrative into textbooks for Jewish students.

Some hardline Israelis vowed to fight the decision by Education Minister Yuli Tamir, insisting it made Israel look like it was apologizing for its own existence.

Tamir "is expressing a sort of political masochist spirit and ... a total lack of national pride," Strategic Affairs Minister Avigdor Lieberman of the hawkish Yisrael Beiteinu Party told Army Radio. (AP)

District Pushes for Capitol Statues

Statuary Hall lacks prominent local figure in tourist showcase

WASHINGTON | It seems the nation's capital just can't get any love from Capitol Hill.

Unlike states, the District of Columbia lacks a full vote in Congress, a well-known fact that has inspired rallies and the popular "Taxation Without Representation" license plates. Lesser known is the District's exclusion from the Capitol's Statuary Hall, where only states can showcase their famous figures in bronze or marble.

The District's leaders are asking Congress to welcome two statues of prominent Washingtonians in the Capitol's statue collection. They say the city deserves statutory recognition just like the rest of the country.

"We are in the continental United States, the Capitol is in our city, and we have schoolchildren who are born and raised in D.C. and go up there and they don't see anyone from here," said D.C. Council member Jack Evans.

U.S. Delegate Eleanor Holmes Norton and city officials see the lack of D.C. statues as yet another snub to the city's nearly 600,000 residents.

"What it means to the District is the insult of being the city for the nation's capital, but having none of your own heroes, where all the other heroes are commemorated," Norton said. "We think as American citizens we deserve the same respect."

City officials have yet to make a final decision about who they want to commemorate in the Capitol.

Last year, residents voted on the matter and made 19th-century abolitionist and journalist Frederick Douglass their top pick.

As a man known for his dedication to equality and for his contributions to both African-American and D.C. history, "he is just a man of enormous stature and is identified very much with Washington, D.C.," Evans said.

Immigration Protest Heats Up

Group against illegals tells Montgomery County to cut center

GAITHERSBURG, MD. | The immigration protest is heating up in Montgomery County, where a group protesting Gaithersburg's day-laborer center is drawing upon the examples of Loudoun and Prince William counties.

Help Save Maryland is a group that advocates cutting benefits for illegal immigrants.

The organization held a protest at the center to tell elected officials they should stop funding the center that the county set up.

Gaithersburg officials could not find a site that was not met with protests before opening one just outside the city limits in April.

Residents who came out to protest said they were upset their tax dollars go to illegals.

County Executive Isiah "Ike" Leggett supports the day-laborer center and says Montgomery County will not follow in the footsteps of Prince William and Loudoun counties.

Those jurisdictions this month passed legislation against giving services to illegal immigrants.

A slightly larger group held a counter-protest across the street. (AP)

Md. Seeks National Scenic Corridor

LEONARDTOWN, MD. | Two southern Maryland counties hope to persuade federal transportation officials to designate more than 100 miles of roadway in the localities as a national scenic corridor.

Dubbed the Religious Freedom Byway, the route through St. Mary's and Charles counties runs along the Potomac River. In their pitch to the Federal Highway Administration, the counties plan to highlight places such as the 18th-century Christ Episcopal Church in Chaptico, which was vandalized by the British during the War of 1812. (AP)

Chip in Your Shoulder

Tiny ID tags are going under the skin for the next step in security

TRACKING | CityWatcher.com, a provider of surveillance equipment, attracted little notice itself — until a year ago, when two of its employees had glass-encapsulated microchips with miniature antennas embedded in their forearms.

The “chipping” of two workers with RFIDs — radio frequency identification tags as long as two grains of rice and as thick as a toothpick — was merely a way of restricting access to vaults that held sensitive data and images for police departments, a layer of security beyond key cards and clearance codes, the company said.

“To protect high-end secure data, you use more sophisticated techniques,” Sean Darks, chief executive of the Cincinnati-based company, said. He compared chip implants to retina scans or fingerprinting.

Innocuous? Maybe.

But the news that Americans had been injected with electronic identifiers to perform their jobs fired up a debate over the proliferation of ever-more-precise tracking technologies and their ability to erode privacy in the digital age.

To some, the microchip was a wondrous invention — a high-tech

UNDERCOVER: The debate is heating up over the use of electronic identification chips, such as this one from VeriChip, which can be implanted under the skin.

helper that could increase security at nuclear plants and military bases, help authorities identify wandering Alzheimer’s patients and allow consumers to buy their groceries, literally, with the wave of a chipped hand.

To others, the notion of tagging people was Orwellian, a departure from centuries of history and tradition in which people had the right to go and do as they pleased without being tracked.

“Ultimately,” says Katherine Albrecht, a privacy advocate who specializes in consumer education and RFID technology, “the fear is that the government or your employer might someday say, ‘Take a chip or starve.’”

Darks, the CityWatcher.com executive, said his employees volunteered to be chipped. “You would think that we were going around putting chips in people by force,” he told a reporter, “and that’s not the case at all.” TODD LEWAN (AP)

Future of WSJ Is a Family Affair

Bancroft group keeps mum as it considers Murdoch's takeover bid

NEW YORK | When the Bancroft family meets Monday to consider Rupert Murdoch's $5 billion bid for Wall Street Journal publisher Dow Jones & Co., relatively few of them will actually be named Bancroft.

And if their names are hard to keep track of, it's been just as hard trying to predict the outcome of their vote about Dow Jones. Today, the family that controls Dow Jones and its flagship, the Wall Street Journal, is in its sixth generation, with adult members spread out across the country.

THE BANCROFT FAMILY

Key members voting on Murdoch's bid for Dow Jones include:

- Chris Bancroft: A Dow Jones board member who owns an investment firm in Texas.
- Leslie Hill: Her mother, Jane MacElree, has 18.5 percent of the company's supervoting shares.
- Elizabeth Steele: President of a real estate development company in Vermont.
- Michael Elefante: Not a blood relative of the Bancrofts but is their lead trustee and is a member of a law firm that is the family's longtime trust adviser. (AP)

They initially rejected Murdoch's offer out of hand, but then agreed to meet with him and eventually won assurances that he wouldn't meddle with the paper's news coverage.

The Bancroft clan has become large and far-flung since 1902, when Boston newspaperman Clarence W. Barron bought control of the company founded 20 years earlier by Charles Dow, Edward Jones and Charles Bergstresser. Control then passed to Barron's stepdaughter, Jane Barron, who married Hugh Bancroft, and on to their descendants.

Key members haven't spoken publicly about their leanings, but Chris Bancroft told the Journal in May that he was opposed to Murdoch's offer, saying the paper would be less independent under him.

The family receives a meaningful amount of income from their Dow Jones holdings. Collectively, they own 16.5 million of the company's supervoting Class B shares, representing about 82 percent of the class, which isn't traded publicly.

After the initial meeting Monday in Boston, the family is expected to take several days to consider Murdoch's bid. SETH SUTEL (AP)

Netflix Lowers Cost of Plans by $1

SAN FRANCISCO | Online DVD rental pioneer Netflix Inc. is lowering the price of its two most popular subscription plans by a $1 per month, relinquishing millions of dollars in revenue in an attempt to regain the upper hand in a cutthroat battle with rival Blockbuster Inc.

With the reductions announced Sunday, Netflix will charge $16.99 per month for a plan that allows subscribers to keep up to three DVDs at a time with no limit on how frequently the discs can be mailed back in return for another movie. The price for a similar plan that lets customers keep one DVD at a time will fall to $8.99 per month.

The price cuts, which take effect Tuesday, match the fees charged by Blockbuster for similar online-only services. (AP)

NOT MUCH IN THEATERS: "I Now Pronounce You Chuck and Larry," the Adam Sandler flick about two men pretending to be romantically involved, took box office gold last weekend. "Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix" was the No. 2 film.

GONE GLOBAL: "Harry Potter" has truly become a worldwide phenomenon. Above, Canadian fans scramble to get the last book.

'Potter' Madness

Final book in series provides readers with long-awaited answers

WIZARD | The books are out; the word is spreading.

"The last 'Potter' is amazing. It has definitely gone way beyond what I expected," Deb Kiehlmeier, 16, of Cherry Hill, N.J., said of "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows," which was released Saturday worldwide.

"'Harry Potter' fans are always trying to predict what will happen next, and J.K. Rowling always gives them something different," Kiehlmeier told The Associated Press.

On Day 1 of the A.H. (After Harry) Era, reviewers and readers mourned the end of a historic series that proved young people can still crave the written word like the crispiest french fry.

It was a day for the sleepless and the sleepy to enjoy and to recall one last, fresh taste of Potter.

Critics bowed before Rowling's achievement. She was compared to the greats of children's and fantasy authors — J.R.R. Tolkien, L. Frank Baum, Roald Dahl — and held in awe for living up to the most intimidating standards.

"To create such an extraordinary world, fill it with complicated characters and convergent back stories is beyond the reach of most writers," wrote the Los Angeles Times' Mary McNamara.

"To sustain that world and grow those characters over seven books filled with plot twists, folklore and even a magical curriculum and then bring it all to an articulate, emotionally wrenching conclusion — that is a truly epic quest."

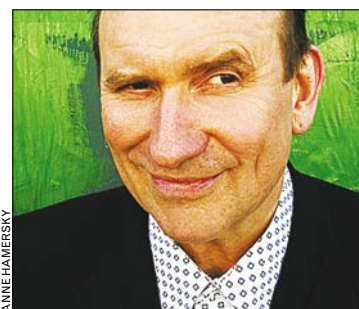

On Saturday, bookstores around the world welcomed eager readers, young and old, in glasses and capes, some shivering, some sweaty, all joined by the thick hardback book with the opening words: "The two men appeared out of nowhere, a few yards apart in the narrow, moonlit lane."

For those who cannot wait to find out whether Harry lives, Potter fan Julie Neal advises patience. In a customer review on Amazon.com, she writes, "Regardless of the temptation, don't skip to the end. It doesn't work. The answers to all those key questions everyone wants to know unfold throughout the story."

"Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows," sold a mountainous 8.3 million copies in its first 24 hours on sale in the United States, according to Scholastic Inc. Borders Group Inc., the second-largest U.S. bookseller, said Sunday it had sold about 1.2 million copies of "Deathly Hallows" worldwide on the book's first day of sales, the best single-day performance of any title in company history. Seven of the top 10 best sellers on Amazon.com were Potter books Saturday, including a box set coming out in September. HILLEL ITALIE (AP)

A Rose Sounds Sweet Stateside

An American artist hopes to make her talent known at home

MUSIC | Boston-area native Eileen Rose left home to seek her fortune on the London music scene, where she released a pair of critically acclaimed albums and shared stages with David Gray, Norah Jones and Radiohead.

Despite her success overseas, the lure of home proved too strong in the post-Sept. 11 world, and Rose came back to Boston. Her musical base was in London, though, and moving home meant essentially starting over her career. "Come the Storm" is a powerful first step. It's stirring, full of rootsy rockers and soulful ballads from a singer-songwriter with a knack for making deeply personal sentiments feel universal.

Rose wrote the record while spending a winter alone in a rented house on Martha's Vineyard, and the songs bear traces of snowed-in solitude as she searches in vain for extra-temporal answers on the searing "Nothing but Blue" and takes rueful stock of life on the fast-paced "Last New Year's Eve." Her voice is by turns strong and sweet; she sounds mournful on the piano ballad "Time to Go" and turns soft sadness into steely resolve on "Stagger Home." ERIC R. DANTON (THE HARTFORD COURANT)

TEEN DRAMA: The CW targets a youthful demographic with shows like "Gossip Girl."

Viewers Before Emmys

The CW aims to up its ratings before it worries about awards

NETWORK | The CW has its eye on something, and it's definitely not the Emmys.

The new and ratings-challenged network, the recent union of the former UPN and WB networks, scored a single Emmy nomination Thursday — one less than the cable channel "Animal Planet."

"It's an honor to be able to garner any nominations," Dawn Ostroff, the CW's president of entertainment, said Friday during an hour-long news conference, part of the annual summer television press tour in Beverly Hills. But "we don't sit down and say we've got to get Emmy awards."

Instead, what Ostroff and other CW executives sit down and strategize about is corraling old and new viewers in the 18 to 34 age demographic. The CW, which, among broadcast networks, already has the lowest average median age for its viewers at 32, urgently needs to gain a larger chunk of viewers that it made only marginal headway with in the transition last year, merging from two networks into one.

The network is out to do more than just regain ground; it wants to gain younger viewers in a crowded entertainment universe that includes broadcast and cable television, and iPods, computers and cell phones. One technique will be to amp up the interaction between the network's television and online content.

"Online Nation," which premieres Sept. 23, is a half-hour show that chiefly aims to turn "mouse potatoes" into "couch potatoes" by taking a look at some of the Web's best user-generated content. Another tack will be to encourage viewers of the network's much-buzzed-about newcomer, "Gossip Girl," to participate in a sophisticated online community in which they can dance, shop and interact with others while they watch the show. "Gossip Girl," an hour-long teen drama, debuts Sept. 26.

The online experience is "to be able to watch the show while you're talking to your friends," said Ostroff, who added that the targeted demographic is known for multitasking and being online practically all day.

In addition to "Gossip Girl," the CW this fall will launch two other new dramas — "Reaper" and "Life Is Wild" — and one new comedy, "Aliens in America."

HELPING HANDS: The mobster in "The Darkness" has demonic pals to assist him.

Just Gaming In the Dark

Jack Estacado kills stuff in a new, highly entertaining game

VIDEO GAME | Shut off the lights and prepare for an entertaining blend of Mafioso-meets-macabre in the new video game "The Darkness" for the PlayStation 3 and Xbox 360.

This M-rated, $59.99 first-person shooter, based on the comic-book series of the same name, dares to be different — and, for the most part, succeeds.

The surprisingly interesting story centers on mobster Jackie Estacado. He soon finds himself on the bad side of a deal gone wrong with his employer, who just happens to be the Don of the New York mafia.

So, what does he do? Well, what does any trained assassin do? He kills stuff.

In "The Darkness," that includes pretty much everything in his path — mobsters, police officers and random strangers — in a blood-soaked zeal to exact revenge on his former employers.

He has a variety of weapons, including pistols and shotguns, at his disposal.

What makes this game different from other first-person shooters are the demonic powers Estacado gains as the game progresses.

You see, Estacado isn't just a professional killer. He's also somehow become possessed by evil spirits, giving him a pair of grisly, snarling tentacle-like serpents that sprout from his shoulders with the tap of a button.

He can summon this "Darkness" mode and other powers at will, and with devastating results for his enemies.

He gains the ability to withstand gunshot wounds more effectively, and his supernatural abilities add various possibilities. I was able to guide one of the tentacles around corners to take out enemies from afar, for example.

You also can summon little demonic buddies who'll help unlock doors and fight for you. (Just be sure to shoot out all the street lamps; demons in this world don't last long when exposed to light.)

It's this dynamic that makes the game so much fun. There's shooting aplenty, but the demonic powers bring a new dimension to the action, making the game much more than a simple point-and-shoot affair. MATT SLAGLE (AP)

Gracefully Acted

Holly Hunter stars in a supernatural police drama on TNT

ANGEL | “Saving Grace” (10 p.m., TNT) becomes the latest but hardly the last in a long line of paranormal police procedurals. “Grace” concerns an alcoholic, adulterous, violent, promiscuous female police officer who is touched by an angel named Earl (Leon Rippey) who looks and acts like a good ol’ boy. Except when he doesn’t.

Holly Hunter is well cast here as the rootin'-tootin' protagonist. It's a character we've come to know from her memorable roles in “Broadcast News,” “Raising Arizona” and “Thirteen.” Just in case we’re not convinced that Grace is living knee-deep in sin, she’s seen in the show’s opening moments having sex with her partner (Kenny Johnson, “The Shield”). Hunter does a credible job as the hedonistic skeptic unwilling or unable to accept evidence of divine intervention.

ERIK A. HEINICH A

"Grace" offers a jarring combination of gritty police work and supernatural mystery, but at least it never confuses the two. Earl was not sent here to solve mere crimes. The show goes over the top only when Earl feels compelled to reveal his powers. This reduces evidence of things unseen to a mere special effect. KEVIN MCDONOUGH

Padraig Harrington became the first Irishman in 60 years to lift the claret jug after he defeated Sergio Garcia in a four-hole playoff.

Luck of the Irish at British

Harrington overcomes 6-stroke deficit to beat Garcia in playoff

GOLF | Padraig Harrington finally learned the lesson of Carnoustie, surviving a calamitous finish in regulation and a tense putt for bogey on the final hole of a playoff to win the British Open on Sunday.

In a nail-biter of a final round that stirred memories of Jean Van de Velde's collapse eight years ago, Harrington lost a one-shot lead on the 72nd hole by hitting into the Barry Burn — not once, but twice — on his way to double bogey.

It looked like a sure loss, but not on this crazy course.

Given a one-shot lead, Sergio Garcia gave it right back when he couldn't make par from a bunker on the last hole.

Harrington staked himself to a two-shot lead in the four-hole playoff. The Irishman played it safe off the 18th tee in the playoff with an iron off the tee and laying up short of Barry Burn.

out of the rough to birdie range. His 25-foot putt skimmed the edge of the cup, leaving Harrington a 3-footer for the win.

"It's going to take a long time for it to sink in," Harrington said, the first Irishman to win the British Open in 60 years. "I know it was only a short putt, but the emotions of it ... I couldn't believe it as it was rolling in from right in the middle of the hole, and I'm thinking, 'The Open champion.' A huge amount of it was genuine shock."

Garcia was devastated, blowing a three-shot lead going into the final round only to be handed a gift he couldn't take.

"To tell you the truth, I don't feel like I did anything wrong," said Garcia, who closed with a 73 and was 1-over in the playoff. "I really didn't miss a shot in the playoff. I hit unbelievable putts. They just didn't go in." DOUG FERGUSON (AP)

Header Moves N.Y. Ahead of D.C.

United falls behind rival Red Bulls, misses out on scoring chances

UNITED | John Wolyniec scored on a header in the first half and reserve goalie Jon Conway recorded his third shutout of the season as the New York Red Bulls beat D.C. United 1-0 on Sunday.

Wolyniec's goal — his third of the season — came in the 19th minute, after United midfielder Joshua Gros pulled down Red Bulls captain Claudio Reyna. With the direct free kick, Reyna sent the ball toward Jozy Altidore, who headed it to Wolyniec, who then beat goalie Troy Perkins.

Conway had four saves for the Red Bulls (8-6-3), who won for just the second time in their last seven matches.

Filling in for Ronald Wattererus, who sat out with a sprained ankle, Conway earned the shut-out with a strong game and some misplays by United (7-6-3), which squandered a few scoring opportunities.

Both teams played without their leading scorers. The Red Bulls were without Juan Pablo Angel, who served a one-game suspension for getting a red card in his team's previous game against New England, while United's Jaime Moreno, Major League Soccer's all-time leading scorer, sat out with a hamstring strain. Nats Win With Kearns' Home Run

Four pitchers combine to shut out Rockies in series-clinching victory

NATIONALS | Austin Kearns hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning and four Washington pitchers combined on a second consecutive shutout of the Colorado Rockies in the Nationals' 3-0 victory Sunday.

The Nationals took the lead in the eighth after D'Angelo Jimenez singled to right off Jorge Julio (0-3) with two outs and went to second on a passed ball by Yorvit Torrealba. Ryan Zimmerman was intentionally walked before Kearns hammered a 1-0 pitch into the left-field mezzanine for his sixth homer.

Kearns' homer was his first in 53 games, a span of 186 at-bats, and made a winner out of Jon Rauch (5-2), who got out of a two-on, two-out jam in the eighth.

"I've gone that long before, so it's not something I'm concerning myself with," said Kearns, who last homered May 21. "Just trying to get the run in. If I start trying to hit home runs, I'm really going to struggle. That's not my approach."

The Rockies, who haven't scored in 20 innings, went 0-for-26 with runners in scoring position in the series. The Nationals won three of the four games.

Tim Redding threw 6 2/3 scoreless innings for Washington before Chris Booker struck out pinch-hitter Ryan Spilborghs with runners on the corners for the final out of the seventh.

Colorado starter Josh Fogg allowed three hits, walked three and struck out one in six shutout innings. (AP)

Three Orioles pitchers allow A's just 2 hits in series rubber match

ORIOLES | Jeremy Guthrie combined with two relievers on a two-hitter, and Kevin Millar and Jay Payton hit a run-scoring singles Sunday to lead the Baltimore Orioles over the fading Oakland Athletics 2-0.

Guthrie (6-3) allowed two hits in seven innings, struck out six and walked three. His ERA dropped to 2.88, third in the AL.

Brazilians, Cubans Spar After Judo Fight

PAN AM GAMES | The rivalry between Cuba and Brazil heated up at the Pan American Games with a scuffle between the Cuban delegation and Brazilian fans following a judo fight Sunday.

Fans were upset after a controversial decision by a judge gave Cuban Sheila Espinosa the victory over Brazil's Erika Miranda in the under 114-pound women's final.

The fans began booing and throwing plastic cups at the judge and the Cuban fighter. At the same time, an altercation began after fans were upset with the celebration of members of the Cuban delegation.

No punches were thrown, but security guards had to intervene and remove the Cubans from the site for their safety. (AP)

Foul Called on NBA Refs

Latest scandal brings credibility issues to the forefront yet again

NBA | Suddenly, the occasional bad call doesn't seem like such a big deal.

NBA referees' competency has always been criticized. After three high-profile negative stories in the last three months, the questions have shifted to their credibility.

One official was suspended after allegedly challenging an NBA superstar to a fight, and an academic report suggested a bias by referees against players of the opposite race.

Now, most damaging, a referee's at the center of a potential point-shaving scandal.

With the FBI investigating Tim Donaghy for allegedly betting on games that he officiated, confidence in the guys blowing the whistles may never have been lower.

“We are going to work hard to restore the public's trust in the integrity of the officials in the NBA,” Lamell McMorris, leader of the referees' union, said. “We're going to do our part to gain and regain the public trust and confidence and to make sure that this is not the final word regarding how referees are defined in the public eye.”

Last year, commissioner David Stern said the NBA had “the best officials, the best-monitored officials, the best-developed officials in all of sports.”

But now it's their judgment, not their performance, that needs defending. BRIAN MAHONEY (AP)

Dane Shows Shades of Armstrong

TOUR DE FRANCE | Look carefully enough and Michael Rasmussen is starting to resemble Lance Armstrong, and it's not just because the Dane is wearing the Tour de France leader's yellow jersey.

Rasmussen extended his lead against top rivals — except Spain's Alberto Contador — after the 14th stage Sunday. Rasmussen is showing that he, like Armstrong, knows how to control the race, holding off attacks before breaking away with Contador on the final climb.

Because of bonus seconds awarded for the stage victory, Contador gained eight seconds on Rasmussen and vaulted to second overall, 2:31 back. (AP)

Construction

Building a subway in sandy Amsterdam is a tricky proposition

Seventeenth-century masons built Amsterdam on a foundation of wooden poles planted in soggy, sandy ground, leaving behind a beautiful architectural museum — but one with walls prone to sinking or crumbling without warning. So, how do you dig a subway under it?

Very carefully.

Construction of a new "North-South" line for this city of canals and rivers began in 2003 and is presenting Dutch engineers, famed for their ingenuity in keeping this waterlogged nation dry, with devilish challenges.

"The politicians told us: 'We want a subway; we're prepared to pay for it and accept some disruption, but the one thing we absolutely don't want is any damage to the city,'" said Johan Bosch, the project manager. "We need a system so that if things don't go as expected, we don't find out after the damage is irreparable."

The solution: 7,000 mirrors hung in clusters of three on buildings along the 2.4 miles of the route that's underground. Measuring devices shine infrared beams onto each mirror once an hour, measure the reflection, and feed data into a central computer.

After triangulating, the computer raises the alarm if any building shifts more than 0.5 millimeters in any direction. A millimeter is the thickness of a paper clip.

The system, unique on such a large scale, has already told townspeople something they may have guessed but couldn't know for sure: Theirs is a city in motion.

"We now know that whole segments of the city move by themselves a number of millimeters over the course of a season," Bosch said.

The biggest technical challenge is building a subway stop directly beneath the city's main train station — a landmark 19th-century building — while it remains in use.

SAFETY FIRST: Engineers are taking many precautions with Amsterdam's subway.

A quarter of a million travelers pass through Centraal Station every day, and few of them realize construction is happening beneath their feet.

"It's probably better that people don't see this," said Bert van de Zande of Strukton, the contractor responsible for this part of the project, pointing to I-beams supporting the building's main columns.

Strukton workers eventually will dig a 60-foot-deep trench under the station and connect it to the IJ River, which flows directly behind.

"It'll be the world's most expensive covered canal," Van de Zande said. When all is ready, a segment of concrete tunnel 450 feet long will be buoyed with air like a submarine, floated into the trench, and then allowed to settle gently into place.

“We now know that whole segments of the city move by themselves over the course of a season.”

JOHAN BOSCH, PROJECT MANAGER

And they expect that to work? "We haven't missed a deadline yet," Van de Zande said.

Workers digging space for a wall at the Rokin station were alerted by the mirror monitoring system that buildings on a nearby street began to sway back and forth. On further inspection, they found they had run into a layer of horizontal poles at a level where they expected to find sand.

Eventually, Bosch said, workers got through the layer using 36-foot steel tubes with drill bits welded to the end, chewing up the wood and sucking it out as if through a straw.

"It didn't seem prudent to keep on going, so we had to find another way," Bosch said. "I'm sure it won't be the last time we have to improvise." TOBY STERLING (AP)

A TV ad for Luvs diapers has enraged some Beatles fans

Help! Some Beatles fans are feeling down about a television ad that uses the 1967 peace anthem "All You Need Is Love" to sell disposable diapers.

"I just cannot see a Beatles song being used for trivial things ... not Beatles songs!!!!" fan Andy Bonnell said by e-mail from Liverpool, England, the Beatles' home base.

Such sentiments represent something of a lost cause. A version of the Beatles song "Help!" was used in a car commercial in 1985, and since then, the band's catalog has appeared in numerous ad campaigns.

But the "All You Need ..." ad, launched this month for Procter & Gamble Co.'s Luvs diapers, struck a particularly sour note for some fans. Among the objections is that the idealistic song, which was a rallying cry for Vietnam War opponents, is being used at the time of another war, in Iraq, to evoke soiled diapers.

Procter & Gamble is using a famous Beatles song to sell Luvs disposable diapers.

"For people who feel that political connection, it comes off as kind of a callous action," said Angela Natividad, co-editor of adrants.com.

"Cha-Chi" Loprete of WZLX radio in Boston has been hosting "Breakfast With the Beatles" shows for more than two decades.

"For me, it corrupts and con-

“For me, it corrupts and contaminates the memories I have, with a recording of ‘All You Need Is Love’ and it’s about a diaper.”

taminates the memories I have, with a recording of ‘All You Need Is Love’ and it’s about a diaper,” he said. “John Lennon must be rolling over in his grave.”

The Cincinnati-based consumer products company calls the campaign an upbeat introduction to Luvs’ “Bear Hug Stretch,” offering “premium leakage protection” at no extra cost.

“Classic songs have been used for some time to connect with the consumer and drive emotion for a product or brand,” said Lisa Jester, a P&G baby care spokeswoman. “Music has a way of connecting us and making us smile.”

She said the Luvs commercial, showing a diaper-clad toddler wrestling with a stuffed bear as his smiling family watches, was popular in testing with parents, who gave high marks to the music.

Jester wouldn’t say how much P&G paid to use the song, recorded by a studio group in New York. P&G boosted Luvs’ marketing budget by 20 percent — dollar figures weren’t released — for the multimedia campaign.

Some veteran fans have come to accept such commercials.

Charles Rosenay, who organizes pilgrimages to Liverpool called the “Magical History Tours,” said his young children have been introduced to the hooks of Beatles songs by commercials.

“Then they hear the whole song and they love that song. ... It has a positive effect, teaching a new generation about the Beatles,” he said.

At 23, Natividad is among current fans born long after the Beatles’ 1970 breakup. She questions the context of the Luvs ad, but agrees it could be effective.

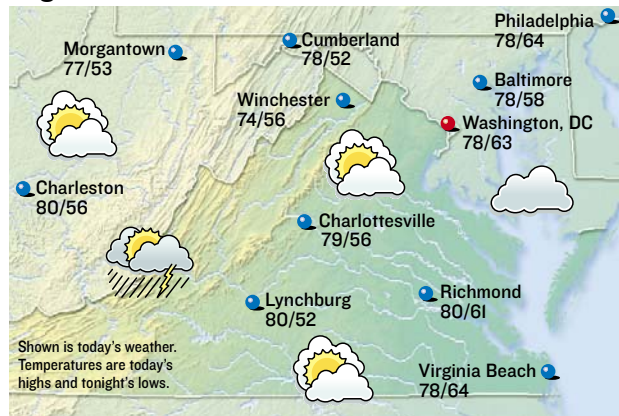

“My best friend’s mother thought it was very, very cute, and a lot of mothers will probably feel that way,” she said. “It really depends on the age of people and from what perspective they’re looking at it.”

THE MANY FACES OF BECKHAM: The soccer star's major looks include a fauxhawk, diamond earrings that might weigh more than Posh, a buzz cut and blond highlights.

Footballer Fab

Can Becks bring high style to American men off the field?

David Beckham: international soccer star, heartthrob; designer clothes horse; and European fashion icon.

But does he have what it takes to influence the looks of that notoriously stodgy species known as the American man? For the brave few, maybe.

For the others, maybe he can give them what he is best known for — a good kick — to at least try some new things that could take them out of the baggy pants-big shirt rut, men's fashion experts say.

"Beckham's here to show us not to be scared," says Daniel Biloett, men's fashion expert for About.com. "It's OK to look this great."

Beckham, now No. 23 for the Los Angeles Galaxy soccer team, has made his name in fashion by becoming a kind of chameleon, trying on hairstyles, trends and designers to suit each passing whim. He has cultivated an eclectic style, wearing everything from tight Armani suits to deconstructed jeans to flashy rhinestone-encrusted tracksuits.

That fondness for sexy clothes contrasts with America's looser, boxier style, says Biloett. Beckham wears body-conscious pants and shirts unbuttoned to the navel, things many American men would reject on principle.

American males are eager to be comfortable and to appear laid-back. "If you look too put together,

“He just always looks trendy and cool. I'm a bit old to pull most of it off myself, but I really admire his style.”

ENDA McDONOUGH, MAN

you appear persnickety," he says.

But Beckham is often all about being put together, touting the benefits of facials and manicures, and admits to both shaving his body and highlighting his hair.

Beckham's free-spirited, experimental approach could give men permission to try on different styles, Blackman says.

Of course, experimentation means at least occasional failure.

"The jury's still out in terms of his taste level," says Wendell Brown, senior fashion editor at Esquire.

Fans were skeptical when Beckham started wearing giant diamond earrings. Photographers winced when he grew his hair into a mullet. And the public recoiled in horror when he paired velour tracksuits with pink-polished fingernails.

But even Beckham's ill-conceived style choices have had an influence in Europe: His bleach blond fauxhawk inspired a generation of British schoolchildren, and his short-lived penchant for shaving off half an eyebrow almost caught on.

"He just always looks trendy and cool," says accountant Enda McDonough, 34, shopping at a Gap in Manhattan. "Sadly I'm a bit old to pull most of it off myself, but I really admire his style."

Post TV columnist LISA DE MORAES was online Friday and talked about NBC snagging Isaiah Washington for its upcoming "Bionic Woman" series, certain "ticks" on-air talent acquire and the demise of Fox's "The Bernie Mac Show."

Is NBC snagging Isaiah Washington for its "Bionic Woman" show a casting coup or a disaster waiting to happen?

Oh, that's such an easy question — it's a publicity stunt to make noise and get eyeballs for the first episode of a show that, by all accounts I hear, is having some troubles. And, see? We're talking about it now. He's only signed for five episodes. That speaks volumes.

What happened to "The Bernie Mac Show"? I thought it was really funny.

Death by scheduling. Fox moved it around and into so many horrible time slots, people finally gave up. It is one of the sadder chapters in recent TV history, if you ask me. It was a brilliant show.

Aaagh! Ann Curry. She has picked up the annoying habit of acknowledging her cue just like Stone Phillips did, with the nod of her head and the intake of breath. Did they go to the same school, or don't they want me to watch "Dateline"? Please make them stop.

I know. You can't watch news on-air talent once you've figured out what their tick is. Connie Chung, for instance, always bobs her head up and down during a good-news story and from side to side when reading a bad-news story. Once someone pointed that out to me, she was ruined for me forever.

Study Candidates on Guns

THE DEBATE OVER gun laws in the last few letters has been intriguing. Let us not forget, however, that the first letter ("Guns Not Root of Violence," July 17) was about how politicians often resort to overused rhetoric and cliché expressions to win voters. Americans, especially those in the D.C. area, should not allow themselves to be fooled by such arguments. Rather, they should take on the responsibility to analyze candidates' opinions and decide for themselves who best represents their interests.

Special Report solves the "My home isn't selling" problem

WASHINGTON METRO – A "Special Report" explodes what its author exposes as "The myth of slow home sales." In fact, the Report explains, in clear and plain English, how a home owner who wants to sell can not only count on a sale within 120 days but can be guaranteed that the sale will occur.

The Report proves its accuracy by quoting specific local instances in which the technique it describes has sold homes time after time, quickly, efficiently, and at a favorable price.

The author of the report, noted realtor Frank Sanya, has made numerous appearances on both television and radio.

Mr. Sanya states that the Report represents the compendium of his many years of real estate experience and can be of substantial value to homeowners, especially those whose homes have been on the market unsold for a considerable period of time. The author emphasizes that although he does not accept every listing, by following the Report's procedures he accomplishes a sale in every instance in which he is the broker of record.

The secret, says the Report, is a combination of traits and procedures that consistently result in a successful sale. For a free copy of the Report, go to a private but available Web site – www.WantItSoldNow.com.
